ASC! / activating common spaces

Strategies for regenerating open spaces in Lambrate neighborhood

The teaching proposal works on the Lambrate neighborhood, part of the consolidated city where processes of transformation are underway and where different active citizenship practices enliven the neighborhood and its public spaces. With the support of teachers, local groups and local associations, students observed and investigated this portion of the city paying attention to the issue of public space, conceived as a system of shared spaces that could work as spaces of connection and regeneration, for inhabitants and their social practices, and to improve social and urban quality.
