Mapping San Siro

A multidisciplinary research group exploring policies and projects in/for the public housing neighborhood of San Siro

Mapping San Siro (MSS) is a research action project taking place in the public housing neighborhood of San Siro in Milan. It's a live lab, in which a group of teachers, young researchers, students and practitioners experiment knowledge-sharing between academia and neighborhood, enhancing teaching and research activities through civic engagement. Mapping San Siro is located in the 30metriquadri, a space in the ground floor of housing estate, in which are hosted educational and research activities, co-design with residents and local realities, public meetings on the research issues.
